Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the proposed variance V0027-23. Development setbacks from stream banks and lake shorelines are an important tool for protecting water quality. Riparian vegetation provides natural filtration of stormwater runoff and provides numerous other benefits to promote healthy surface water ecology. DEQ recognizes that there are sometimes unique circumstances that may justify reduced setbacks. While an individual variance likely has a relatively small impact on water quality, the cumulative impact of development in close proximity to shorelines and stream banks is a significant threat to water quality. DEQ advises local government planning departments to maintain established setbacks whenever possible. Exceptions should be considered carefully by the local jurisdiction and used only when absolutely necessary to accommodate unique circumstances. Similarly, limits on maximum impervious areas are also beneficial to protecting water quality by minimizing stormwater runoff and retaining vegetation to help filter sediment and utilize nutrients in water. Variances to these requirements should also be considered carefully by the local jurisdiction and used only when absolutely necessary to accommodate unique circumstances.
